From the time of the Civil War, many from the Brockport College community have served their country.

- Co. A, 140th NY Infantry was raised in Brockport and included students and alumni of the college. Many served in other units as well.

- The 140th played an important role at Gettysburg and many other battles.

Reenactors of the 140th NY Infantry.
Spanish American War, 1898

The "Rough Riders" at San Juan Hill.
After Brockport she went on to study nursing at the Bellevue Nursing School in New York City. When the Spanish American War began she joined the Red Cross nursing service and went to Cuba with the army.

She returned home at one point to recover from malaria and "nerve exhaustion" and then returned to serve as a nurse in the Philippines.

Pictured is a group of nurses on a ship off of Cuba.
World War I, 1914-1918

“Doughboys” training with a machine gun.
These trees stood along Utica St. and the north side of Hartwell Hall up until the 1960s.

In the 1932 yearbook, Principal Alfred Thompson wrote:

"Beautiful thoughts are inspired by nature's trees. The Lombardy Poplars around the campus that lift their heads so gracefully to the sky are living memorials to the one hundred one members of our school who answered our country's call in the World War. Some of our poplars did not survive and some of our boys did not return. Beautiful thoughts these trees inspire."
An ambulance driver in WWI, he recalled his experiences in an article in the February 1919 edition of the Stylus, including the war’s ending:

“We celebrated November 11…, everyone was everyone else’s friend and booze enough flowed to float the Maine. …who can say that there was not just the slightest feeling of regret? It meant the end of a big adventure...”
