Untitled

By: Nathaniel Jones

It's mistiness on a dreary day,
And I'm up to more mischievous schemes and my dreams carry clouds of rain.
The acidity burns holes through my plans, hit and miss as I lay weary and wide awake.
In a state of lacking intrinsically and meaning to my existence
I just try to keep my love to the brim but it's a mystery how deep my cup half full will remain, when I'm still thirsty.
