

2019

The Black Body and American Wounds

Cinnamon Vivian Nolley

The College at Brockport, cnolley@brockport.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.brockport.edu/research\_posters

---

Recommended Citation

Nolley, Cinnamon Vivian, "The Black Body and American Wounds" (2019). Posters@Research Events. 34.
https://digitalcommons.brockport.edu/research\_posters/34

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by Digital Commons @Brockport. It has been accepted for inclusion in Posters@Research Events by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @Brockport. For more information, please contact ccowling@brockport.edu, digitalcommons@brockport.edu.

The College at
BROCKPORT
STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK

Toni Morrison's Beloved

The Black Body and American Wounds

Cinnamon Vivian Nolley
The College at Brockport
Mentor: Tait, Althea, PHD

Method

My methodology was an interpretative approach largely using qualitative measures which consist of a close examination of materials that highlight the social and historical impact of American slavery. I have presented a holistic understanding of the effects of slavery on America through analysis of Beloved, one of the most prolific neo-slavery narratives. I specifically focused on how Morrison molds the bodies of her characters to expose the chronic injury that slavery inflicted on American society. In support of my interpretation, I searched for the meaningful impact of slavery within correlating scholarly journals that investigate or are in conversation with Morrison's work.

References

Morrison, Toni. Beloved. PLUME Published by the Penguin Group Penguin Putnam Inc., 375 Hudson Street, New York, New York 10014, U.S.A.

Levy, Andrew. Telling Beloved. Texas Studies in Literature and Language, Vol. 33, No. 1, Authority and Identity (SPRING 1991), pp. 114-123. University of Texas Press

Miller, J. Hillis. Boundaries in Beloved. Symplöke, Vol. 15, No. 1/2, Cinema without Borders (2007), pp. 24-39 Published by: University of Nebraska Press

Duerre Humann, Heather. Bigotry, Breast Milk, Bric-a-Brac, a Baby, and a Bit in "Beloved": Toni Morrison's Portrayal of Racism and Hegemony. Penn State University Press, Interdisciplinary Literary Studies, Vol. 6, No. 1 (Fall 2004), pp. 60-78

Watson, Reginald. The Power of The "Milk" and Motherhood: Images of Deconstruction and Reconstruction in Toni Morrison's "Beloved" and Alice Walker's "The Third Life Of Grange Copeland". CLA Journal, Vol. 48, No. 2 (DECEMBER 2004), pp. 156-182
Published by: College Language Association.

"Anything dead coming back to life hurts"

Research Questions

How does Toni Morrison use the bodies of her characters to express the unspeakable horror of slavery? How does Morrison create a holistic view of the collective wound that slavery left on America?

Introduction

My research of the novel Beloved registers in two ways. I have explored how Toni Morrison crafts the bodies of her characters as a space that physically maps out the historical impact of slavery on America. I examined how she used keloids, scars, or lack thereof to create a chorus of the voiceless trauma dedicated to exposing the extreme crime against humanity that slavery in America was, and the lasting impact it has. I have also analyzed the ambiguous spaces that Morrison uses to expose how slavery's effects are not isolated within the black population, but how they extend to all Americans who share in this collective bodily wound.

Character Analysis

- Beloved: The character of Beloved is a conductor of this chorus of voiceless trauma. Morrison shows the healing power that comes with expressing the physical wounds imprinted on the black community because of slavery
- Sethe: When Beloved is reborn the internal trauma that Sethe has repressed for years is given an external physical form and autonomy, which Beloved uses to force Sethe into confronting the past
- Six: Sixo embodies the black and native relation in pre civil war America. His final words as he's being killed is "Seven-O! Seven-O!". Morrison uses this as an equivocal reference to the Iroquois confederacy's seventh generation principal.
- Garners: Morrison deconstructs the neo-slavery narrative by naming the owners of the Sweet Home plantation the Garners, as an illusion to Margret Garner.