NOTES:

1. Program Proposal and Comparison with Current Admission Requirements

The History department would like to increase the maximum credits a student may have when they apply for the combined degree program in history. Instead of a minimum of 54 and maximum of 84, we would like to have a minimum of 54 and a maximum of 99.

The requirements would thus read:

Before applying to the Combined Program, students must have met the college admissions criteria and been admitted to an undergraduate program at the college. They must have completed a minimum of 54 undergraduate credits, and a maximum of 99 undergraduate credits to be considered for admission. Second baccalaureate degree students are not eligible to apply for admission to the Combined Program. Admission to the Combined Program is selective, restricted to students with exceptional records. Students must have a cumulative 3.0 or better GPA and a 3.25 or better GPA in history through the end of their sophomore year to apply to the Combined Program. Qualified applicants will apply with the same application used for Graduate Admission, including two letters of recommendation from Brockport faculty. Students must also have completed or be in the process of completing HST 390 and one 400-level research-intensive elective.

| Current Admission Requirements | Proposed Admission Requirements |
|--|--|
| Minimum 54 credits | Minimum 54 credits |
| Maximum 84 credits | Maximum 99 credits |
| First degree student | First degree student |
| 3.0 GPA cumulative, 3.25 History or better | 3.0 GPA cumulative, 3.25 History or better |
| Standard Graduate Admission Application | Standard Graduate Admission Application |
| Process or completed 390 and 400 level RI course | Process or completed 390 and 400 level RI course |

2. “Mission”, “Market”, and “Quality”

The purpose of this change in admission is to attract a greater number of students to the combined degree program in history, to give students greater flexibility in applying for the program and to allow transfer students to be eligible for the program more readily. It will help increase retention of undergraduate students, graduate students and improve time to degree.

Currently, the 84-credit limit makes it difficult for students to apply for the combined degree program after they finish their junior year. Our application deadline for the fall is in July, meaning a junior would have already received 90 credits by the time they apply. Since we want to give students flexibility and time to apply properly for the program, we feel it is necessary they be given the same deadline as our other graduate prospects. Having final grades in for their spring junior semester is also essential for our admissions process.

Since many of our best first year students come to the college with credits already accrued, they will arrive at their junior year well ahead of the 90 credits traditionally acquired by full-time students who are taking a 15 credit a semester load. Because of this, we feel it is reasonable to make the maximum credits for application 99, allowing students with non-traditional loads to be eligible longer than they would otherwise be.

Transfer students currently are hampered by the 84-credit rule because they come into the history major with many credits but few at the upper division. They need the time to take our own courses and work their way into our two required courses for applying to the combined degree program: 390 and a 400 level research course. Many of our best students are transfers, but it is usually too late for them to apply for the program when they have proven themselves to us.

Students may of course apply much earlier than 84 credits and some do. But most students are not yet ready in their sophomore year to commit to the 4+1 or are not yet sure what they want to do. It is important to start talking to them about the program that year, but most do not think of it as a real option until later, often too late to apply with the current restrictions.

Dear Dean Prioleau,

I strongly support the History Department's College Senate resolution proposal requesting a change to our 4+1 program. In particular, we would like to increase the maximum number of credits a student has already taken before they are allowed to apply to the program. As it is, many of our otherwise qualified transfer and upper-level undergraduates cannot apply. This move would increase the number of student in our graduate M.A. program by assuring that our own students can enter our program as smoothly as possible.

Most Sincerely,

Alison Parker

Re: Proposal for revisions to the Department of History's combined degree program

I am in full support of the proposed revisions to the Department of History's combined BA/MA program. The increase in the upper limit of credits (from 84 to 99) expands the opportunity for students to apply to the program. Specifically this change allows qualified transfer and upper level undergraduate students who might not otherwise qualify to apply to the program.
