I. Completed cover letter: Please see the first page of this proposal.

II. Side-by-side comparison: Please see the second page of this proposal.

III. Rationale: The proposed changes to the Department of Communication’s graduate program are designed to address matters of mission, market, and quality.

The College at Brockport’s graduate education mission includes leading “students to advanced knowledge and technical skills in the graduate field of study and prepares graduates for doctoral studies and/or professional practice.” Communication is a broad field, including both humanistic and social-scientific approaches to inquiry. Not surprisingly, a number of prominent doctoral programs in Communication (e.g., Louisiana State University) require students to take courses in qualitative and quantitative research methods. By requiring both CMC 601: Quantitative Research Methods and CMC 602: Qualitative Research Methods, the Department will help our students prepare well for doctoral studies. What is more, in the professional realm, practitioners may use a variety of methods (e.g., qualitative for focus groups and quantitative for audience demographics). Thus, adoption of this proposal will aid communication professionals, also.

Regarding market, the adoption of this proposal would bring the MA program in Communication at The College at Brockport in line with its regional competition. For instance, the program at Syracuse University requires students to take multiple courses in research methods.

To ensure the quality of education received by its students, the Department of Communication employs a number of learning outcomes, including “Graduate students will become critical consumers of communication research.” Again, Communication is a broad field of study. If students are to appreciate the full breadth of its research, then proficiency in both qualitative and quantitative research methods is appropriate. Additionally, requiring both 601 and 602 will enhance the rigorous academic experience our department intends for our graduate students.

IV. Description of new courses: Not applicable.

V. Staffing Issues: Staffing issues are not a concern, as the Department is simply requiring courses that are currently offered.

VI. Administration commentary: Please see attached letters from the Chair of the Department of Communication and the Dean of the School of The Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences.

VII. New resources required: None.

VIII. Letters of support from cooperating departments, agencies, etc.: Not applicable.

RE: Proposed Changes to Communication Graduate Curriculum

Senators, I am writing in support of these proposed changes because they will enhance our program. The rationale for this merger has been provided and I believe it is justified. By making these changes, we will be able enhance the research skills of our students and better serve them. Requiring more research oriented courses will also help to achieve a number of the student learning outcomes that we have for the graduate students. Regarding any staffing changes that this proposal might require, we will be able handle them without requiring any new resources.

In closing, thank you for considering these revisions.
To whom it may concern:

Please consider this to be my endorsement of the change in requirements for the graduate program in the Department of Communication. The change is fundamental. They are asking to require CMC 601, Quantitative Methods in addition to their current course requirement CMC 602, Qualitative Methods. There are no additional resources needed and the change will further enrich the education of their graduate students. The offering of these two methods courses is in line with what is being required by similar programs in our peer and aspiration institutions.

Sincerely,

Dean
