RE: PROPOSED CHANGES IN PLS AND INS MAJORS FOR FACULTY SENATE

Dear Chuck,

Please ignore all previous correspondence on the proposed changes to the PLS and INS majors. Some of the details contained therein were wrong. Attached are the correct proposals. I am now submitting a copy to Dean Maggioro who should be contacting you very soon.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Gentlemen,

Here is my contribution to moving the minor changes in our PLS and INS majors forward. Wally, I will permit you to tell Chuck and his committee about the proposed changes in our PLS major, you lucky devil you.

Within the INS Foundation courses, we have proposed deleting CMC 418, Cross-Cultural Communication, because CMC 418 is offered too infrequently. Students who wish to take CMC 418 when it is offered can utilize it as an "Other" Foundation course.

We have decided to require both PLS 111, World Politics, and PLS 112, Comparative Politics, because they cover quite different political phenomena. World Politics is an introductory course in inter-state relations. PLS 112, in contrast, examines the domestic politics and governments of non-American states around the world. We decided that knowledge of both types of political phenomena is sufficiently important that we should require that International Studies majors master them.

We decided to eliminate the PLS 364, Politics of Developing Countries, as a Foundations course and an upper division course within the area tracks because we no longer have a professor qualified to teach it.

Because DNS 200 and DNS 330 overlap a great deal, we decided that students should only be able to take one of them for the purpose of completing the International Studies major. I have spoken with Jackie Davis, Chair of the Department of Dance, and she supports this change.

We decided to add an internship course INS 380 (BCE 349) because of our confidence in experiential learning. At last this is my memory of this decision.

We decided to eliminate PLS 447, Russia in Transition, because we do not have the faculty resources to mount it.
