Chair, Undergraduate Curriculum Committee of the Faculty Senate

The history department has voted to make the following change in its required curriculum for majors. We believe it is a minor change since it does not affect the number of credits.

History majors will no longer be required to take HST 2211 Modern Europe. Instead they must take ONE of

HST 336 Medieval Europe

HST 346 Renaissance and Reformation (11350-1550)

HST 337 Early Modern Europe (11550-11800) (new course)

HST 347 Europe's Long Nineteenth Century (11789-119114) (new course)

HST 449 Twentieth-Century Europe (119114-)

HST 359 European Women

HST 2211 will remain as a registered course to give transfer credit for AP and the second half of Western Civilization taught in community colleges. It will not count toward the European history requirement.

RATIONALE

HST 2211 covers so much ground it is essentially a survey and repeats in somewhat more detail ground already covered in HST 1102. The change gives students greater in-depth knowledge of a smaller period of European history and uses the expertise of existing faculty to best advantage. No new resources are needed.

At least two sections of European history will be scheduled each semester.

A side-by-side comparison is on the reverse side.

Sincerely,

Dr. Owen S. Ireland

Distinguished Teaching Professor and Department Chair

I support the above changes in the History department curriculum.
