CERTIFICATE OF ADVANCED STUDY (CAS) IN EDUCATIONAL ADMINISTRATION

Leading to School District Leader (SDL) Certification

2. BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROPOSAL:

Re-registration of program required by New York State Education Department as a result of the change in administrative certification requirements effective September 1, 2004. Our existing EDA programs meet the new requirements for the SBL and the SDBL certification; however, we were required to add a 6 credit hour course, EDA 896 Central Office Administration, to meet the new state requirements for the SDL certification. The total credit hours still remain the same.

One EDA elective	3 cr.
Transfer credit from previously earned master's degree	24 cr.

3. SUMMARY OF CHANGES:

EDA 896 Central Office Administration (6 cr.) was added to the program. EDA 653 Site Management and one EDA elective (3 cr.) were deleted from the program. The total number of credits for the program remain the same.

4. COURSE DESCRIPTION:

EDA 896 Central Office Administration is a six credit hour course combining direct instruction and field experiences in central office responsibilities. The course is designed to complete the preparation of a candidate for serving as a central office administrator, as in the positions of superintendent, assistant superintendent of instruction, or director of special education. It builds heavily upon the competencies acquired during School Building Leadership preparation and provides a grounding in the more global role of district-wide responsibilities. The course includes five Saturdays (9:00 AM – 4:30 PM) of instruction distributed throughout the semester (the Department's normal instructional delivery method) and also requires a set of field experiences under the guidance of a college professor and a central office mentor.

5. REASON FOR CHANGE:

The New York State Education Department (SED) has promulgated new regulations for administrative certifications, effective September 1, 2004. These new regulations require all educational administration programs in the state to re-register their programs with SED.

There are three different administrative certifications: SBL (School Building Leader Certification for assistant principals and principals), SDBL (School District Business Leader Certification for school business administrators and assistant superintendents of finance), and SDL (School District Leader Certification for central office administrators, including the superintendent). Our existing EDA programs meet the new requirements for the SBL and the SDBL certifications; however, we were required to add a 6 credit hour course, EDA 896 Central Office Administration, to meet the new state requirements for the SDL certification. This is shown in the chart above.

6. RESOURCES

No new resources will be needed to implement this change. Also, no new faculty will be required; current full-time faculty members will be teaching EDA 896.

RE: Education Administration Program Re-registration

I am in support of the proposed changes needed for the CAS in Educational Administration leading to the new School District Leader Certification. These changes are required as a result of the new State Education Department regulations for educational leadership certifications.

The programs leading to the new certificate titles, School Building Leader and School District Business Leader, do not require any revisions. Even though the School Building Leader and School District Business Leader remain unchanged, the State Education Department is requiring re-registration of all three programs, hence your receipt of all three notebooks.

Thank you for your prompt attention to this program revision proposal.
